Care instructions for fronts with a velvet matt surface

Fronts with a velvet matt surface are sealed with a special high matt lacquer. This lacquer lends a special feel to the fronts, which very closely approximates that of a waxed wood front. This lacquer always has a coarser texture than smooth lacquering. Consequently, the following should be observed during cleaning:

Foods and substances with a high proportion of pigments, such as coffee, mustard, tea and red wine, etc. may – once dried on – permanently leave slight discoloration on the foil.

Please therefore observe the following instructions:

- Preferably wash soiling away immediately with a copious amount of water or diluted soap solution. The stains must not be allowed to dry!
- Remains of staining, particularly splashes of fat and fat deposits, can be brushed out with a very warm 30 % soft soap solution with the aid of a washing up or nail brush.

Subsequently wash out the remains of the cleaning solution with clear lukewarm water and wipe dry with a leather cloth.

This procedure may have to be repeated several times. For particularly stubborn stains, cleaners with an alcohol content of max. 15-20 % such as Sidolin, Ajax window cleaner or Bref fat solvent may be used. Test the latter first at an inconspicuous spot. Limit the application time in this case to very brief wiping with slight pressure, since alcohol may damage most lacquering if applied for longer.

When using commercially available household cleaners, it is essential to pay attention to the fact that no coloured cleaners must be used undiluted or concentrated, since their colorants may also leave residues. Substances that have dried on or penetrated over a longer period can only be removed to a limited extent.

This lacquer surface is not resistant to organic solvents such as thinners, nail polish remover, or undiluted spirits. Consequently, the latter must never come into contact with the surface.
